11:11 PM me: hi, Antonio, are you around?
11:13 PM I've just been speaking to my friend Jonathan Farley who runs a small campaign consultancy group and who's written for The Guardian before and has a contact there, and we wanted to see if LeGrow would be interested in having us write an op-ed under his name for publication there; otherwise, we could write a piece in support of him under our own names
11:14 PM at any rate Farley will happily put his firm, The Warren Partners, at your disposal pro bono.
Antonio: which Guardian?
me: U.K.
Antonio: oh interesting
me: the plan is to have splashback on this coasty Antonio: yeah that was the only one I've heard of...
11:15 PM me: as in, Guardian articles often end up on Memeorandum and other U.S. blog mediums and otherwise spark interest in the U.S., particularly when they deal with the U.S.
Antonio: right me: we could write up the column this weekend and show it to you by Sunday Antonio: and you all would be interested in drafting something up that Wynne could sign off on?
me: yes
Antonio: that would be great, thank you 11:16 PM me: ok, great, and I'll have Jonathan e-mail you soon to see what else he might be able to help with Antonio: awesome
